

Introducing Asia

This is the Panjin Red Beach is located in Liaoning, China. By many it has been called the most naturally beautiful landmark in China. Many question why it has such beautiful crimson sand. The reason behind this is that the 51 square miles of beach contains a lovely plant called seepweed. As well as being a beach, it is a massive, diverse ecosystem containing more than 260 bird species and 399 different wild species live in it.

Asia is a beautiful continent, packed full with historical and cultural countries that can be suited to different people's interests. For example, if you like hiking you could go to Beijing ,China and walk along the Great Wall of China. If you are more interested in the historical side of Asia you could go to the Taj Mahal.

This is the icy mountain of Mount Everest. It's summit point is located between the international border of China and Nepal. It's the highest mountain in the world with its height being 8848m above sea level. This mountain was formed approximately 60 million years ago although, it was left nameless for millions of years until 1865 where the Royal Geographical Society gave it it's British name after the British Indian Ruler, Sir George Everest.
